I spoke with Jason Fontenot, the current LDEQ IC, after his 3pm ops meeting. He said that the overnight shifts tonight will be the last ones needed for a few days, as the drilling takes a pause to cement in casings and swap out rigs. He does not know when drilling will resume, but tentatively it may be Monday. They will try to give us as much lead time as possible on the resumption of air monitoring activities. So we will actually get a weekend!
